Planning Commission Members,

I strongly urge you to recommend to the City Council that this unreasonable request be appealed.

Pasadena has been out front in creating new housing units over the past few years and the approach to this allocation is the same formula for all, thus consideration should be given to us for a substantial reduction.

The housing market currently is in a trend away from concentrations of housing where people are crammed together and are moving to the suburbs, in many cases at some considerable distance because it appears they will not be commuting to work four and five days a week. People now want space, a yard and some privacy. Therefore, mass housing as dictated by this directive is not what the current situation is.

Again, I trust you will make a strong move to have the City Council appeal this directive.
