Emerging Pasadena Authors Publish eBook

At a celebration July 26, Diane Walker, Manager of La Pintoresca Branch Library, honored each writer with a printed version of the book and a rose.

A writing workshop at the La Pintoresca Branch Library produced the Pasadena Public Library’s first ever eBook titled Authors in Our Midst: A ‘Courage to Write.’

Over a six-week course taught in the spring by Esther Bradley-DeTally eighteen writers merged their newly found writing skills to compile an eBook.

At a celebration for the e-Book held on July 26, Diane Walker, Manager of La Pintoresca Branch Library, honored each writer with a printed version of the book and a rose.
“In this day and time people need to be able to read however whenever. For us as a library to have our first published eBook, I think it just shows where the library is going. Were looking and seeing what the needs are of the community, were innovative, were staying on top of technology,” Walker said.

One of the women who attended the workshop had been homeless and could not attend the celebration because she had found a job. Her writing mirrored her feelings:

Homelessness looks like how I’m feeling about me. Sometimes homelessness looks like I’ve got it all together and know how to present the Diva in me to the world. Yes, a homeless woman can be a diva on a good day—Sherrie N. Stamps

“La Pintoresca Library vibrates, pulsates, cooks because of the combined energy and dreams. Having every type of voice come in touch with their voice is a dream of mine,” workshop leader Esther Bradley-DeTally said.

Esther has been a writer for many years, living in Russia at one point in her life and moving from New York to Pasadena in 2001. She currently teaches writing courses at the La Pintoresca Branch Library, the Women’s Room for homeless women and women in transition, and private workshops. She also has two published eBooks Without another Sojourn and You Carry the Heavy Stuff.

“Everybody can write. I am astonished I’m a writer and that I’m a writing teacher. It’s always a learning process,” Esther said.

In the class sessions, Esther will give everyone a writing topic and let them loose for 10 minutes. Everyone comes up with a creative twist on the topic with almost no similar writings.

“That’s something I learned that you when write something really personal, and the more personal it is, the more universal it is in a way that everyone can relate to it,” Marcie Chan said.

Marcie Chan is a professional organizer who tries to bring positive energy into people’s lives. This was her first attempt at writing and she enjoyed allowing the writer within her to escape.

“Esther is very nurturing for the writers. It has been great for me to hear the diverse voices; it’s not just my usual circle. It has really widened my world,” Chan said.

Chan wrote an Ode to her Acura:

Driving the Acura, I could imagine that I hadn’t changed as much from my college days as the minivan- and sedan-driving parents around me in the school carline. Obscured by their huge shadows, I felt (much like I do as a person), small but nimble. My car and I looked sporty from afar but up close you could hear squeaky joints and see blemishes I’d concealed with touch-up paint.

Visit the library’s website http://cityofpasadena.net/library/ for more information on the writer’s workshop.
Free celebration of home-grown authors

A celebration of Pasadena’s emerging authors and their newly published e-book, “Authors in Our Midst,” will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. on July 26 at Pasadena Public Library’s La Pintoresca Branch, 1855 N. Raymond Ave. The event is free and open to the public.

Authors in Our Midst was written by participants in the Spring 2018 Courage to Write Writing Workshop led by author/instructor Esther Bradley-DeTally and held at La Pintoresca Branch Library.

The six-week hands-on workshop helps participants find their own voice as they navigate through the process of writing. Workshops are held quarterly. No prior writing experience is necessary.

La Pintoresca Branch Library is the center for the Pasadena READS Literacy program and offers self-paced online tutorial programs and skills-based instructional classes taught in partnership with other literacy agencies and organizations. The library also has a collection of materials for literacy instruction as well as books and kits for adults learning to read.

August 28th will be the 50th anniversary of the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom in 1963, three months before the assassination of President Kennedy.

For this writer who was only a year old, the day most probably came and went with lots of napping, consuming and digesting, but for the mother of said writer, it was a day to be filed with her most reverent memories.

Today, with an African-American holding the highest office in the land, and with the extent of overt and covert racism that has been fueled and unleashed since Barack Obama won the presidency in 2008, remembering—and celebrating—this watershed march that culminated in Martin Luther King’s "I Have a Dream" speech, is especially poignant and important." Interestingly enough, and indicative of his inner fortitude, Bayard was not only a black man and a radical, he was also a pacifist and gay (Huffington Post).

On August 17th, Peter Dreier, Occidental College professor and author of The 100 Greatest Americans of the 20th Century: A Social Justice Hall of Fame, will introduce a screening of the award-winning documentary, Brother Outsider: The Life of Bayard Rustin.

According to Dreier, Rustin, who was the lead organizer for the March on Washington, used “his immense talents—as organizer, strategist, speaker, intellectual, and writer—to effectively challenge the economic and racial status quo. Always an outsider, he helped catalyze the civil rights movement with courageous acts of resistance.”

It is widely accepted that the March on Washington and King’s speech helped precipitate the passing of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the Voting Rights Act of 1965. (For a fascinating blow by blow of this Congressional battle, visit Congressink.org.)

On Thursday, August 9, 2013, President Obama bestowed upon Mr. Bayard the highest civilian award in the United States, the Presidential Medal of Freedom. Mr. Bayard died in 1987.

The 2013 International Book Awards, sponsored by USA Book News, selected San Marino: A Centennial History as the winner in the Best Cover Design: Non-Fiction category. Jeff Lapides of First Water Design took the cover photograph which cinched the award. The book was also a finalist for Lapides’ design of the book interior.

In addition, PubWest – an association of small and medium-sized book publishers – has announced the winners of their 2013 Book Design Awards competition and San Marino: A Centennial History received a gold award for Jacket and Cover Design for large format books. The group recognized Lapides’ design of the book with a bronze award for Historical, Biographical Design.

"The contest recognizes the best designed books in North America so that we can celebrate and learn from their success," said PubWest president Dave Treadler. Awards will be presented in Santa Fe, New Mexico in November.

Published by the San Marino Historical Society, written by Pomeroy, designed by Lapides and produced by Charles Allen Imaging Experts, the book celebrates the unique history of this community. Pomeroy will speak and sign books at Vroman’s on July 11 at 7:00 p.m.
